

LITERATURE REVIEW FOR ORAGANIZATIONAL BEHAVIOR: THE CASE OF TURKEY

Yusuf Esmer
Sinop University, Turkey.

Abstract

One of the most important sources of business, behaviors of human have a great influence on the performance of businesses. For this reason, it is important to examine the studies within the scope of organizational behavior discipline which deals with human behaviors. In this context, in this study, the studies presented in organizational behavior congresses which are carried out in Turkey day to day are examined. In the study, the types of reports are classified according to the type, the methods used, the method of data collection, the method of data analysis, the number of authors, and the content analysis method according to the institutions of the authors. As a result of the research, it is found that the number of studies increases and different methods are used in empirical studies and new concepts are gained in the literature of organizational behavior in Turkey. It is also seen that the literature of organizational behavior has developed from day to day. Thus, in view of the expectation that this research will contribute to the related literature, in recent years, the literature of organizational behavior has been tried to be removed by photographing it.

Keywords: Organizational Behavior, Organizational Behavior in Turkey, Organizational Behavior Congresses, Literature Review